Important Notes:

Many out of state colleges hold informational events in the Seattle area. Students should go to the websites of all the schools they may be interested in and fill out the online "get more information" section. Expressing interest in a college is a positive thing; it shows the school you are interested, pro-active and gives the university the opportunity to invite you to all kinds of events that may be taking place in our area.

At the National College Conference in Seattle last fall, students recommended these websites for the student viewpoint on colleges throughout the nation:
